The Red Shoes

Romantic melodrama, 1948, Powell & Pressburger, Letterboxd 4.4, ranked #70 among top 250 films of all time. A young ballerina rises to stardom, but it comes with increasingly painful choices between love and vocation. Even viewers who don't follow ballet often find themselves swept up by the film's emotional intensity and the famous central dance sequence, which feels like stepping into a painting. It's a film about the cost—and the allure—of giving oneself completely to art. Discussion to follow. Everyone is invited.

Runtime: 134 minutes
