Playtime

Satirical visual comedy, 1967, Jacques Tati, Letterboxd 4.2, ranked #88 among top 250 films of all time. We follow Monsieur Hulot as he wanders through a 1960s modern Paris where glass, steel, and technology seem to have replaced human warmth. The film has almost no traditional plot; instead, it observes people moving through airports, offices, apartments, and showrooms that all look eerily interchangeable. Its famous chaotic sequence unfolds in a brand new restaurant on opening night, where everything that can go wrong does and the crowd's frustration slowly transforms into a kind of joyous, anarchic party. By the end, the chaos feels liberating. Runtime: 2:4, English subtitles)

Romantic drama, 2006, Sarah Polley, Letterboxd 3.8. This is a quietly devastating story about a long-married couple facing the slow erosion of memory and the unexpected emotional distances it creates. As Fiona's dementia progresses, she chooses to enter a care facility, a decision that forces both partners to confront love in a new and painful form. The film treats aging not as a problem to be solved but as a human landscape filled with tenderness, confusion, and grace. Many viewers may recognize pieces of their own lives in its portrait of devotion under strain. It's a film that invites us to reflect gently on what endures when memory does not. (109 minutes, captions)
