FICTION

Land by Maggie O'Farrell

This work of historical fiction is set in 1865 on a windswept Irish peninsula is the story of separation, longing, recovery and survival as a family makes a new home in the aftermath of tragedy. Tomás and his reluctant son, Liam, are working for the great British Ordnance Survey project to map the whole of Ireland. Ireland is a country that recently has been ravaged and emptied by the "Great Hunger", this surveying task is not an easy one. Tomás, however, is determined that his maps will be a record of the disaster.

Under the Falls by Richard Russo

When Tyler Sinclair left Stone Mountain at eighteen, he had no plans of returning. With only a duffel bag full of clothes, a few bucks stolen from his father's dresser, and a guitar, his most prized possession, Tyler disappeared without so much as a goodbye. Eighteen years later, Tyler, now the frontman of a famous band aptly named Stone Mountain, finds himself returning to his hometown for a one-night-only benefit concert to support his old friend, Doc.

NON-FICTION

Regime Change by Maggie Haberman & Jonathan Swan

Written by two reporters who have covered Donald Trump closely for the last decade. This is a riveting, intimate and revelatory account of how Trump has used his power, about who has tried to stop him and why nearly all of them have failed. He has ignored court orders and claimed powers that Congress once checked. What remains is a President willing to take enormous risks that have toppled heads of state and taken the country to war again in the Middle East; an imperial President operating almost entirely on instinct alone. A President who has fundamentally altered the nature of the office he holds.
